Hinkle Creek Results!

with Doug Bateman

The majority of the timber harvest in the Pacific Northwest comes from the minority of the forested land base owned by the private industrial forest sector. Society is more dependent than ever on the productivity of these forestlands. One potential obstacle is concern regarding the environmental effects of intensive management of these lands. The concern results from a lack of knowledge regarding the actual environmental effects caused by contemporary forest management activities at a watershed scale.

After a decade of data collection on The Hinkle Creek Paired Watershed Study, the scientists are eyeballs deep in analysis! Come Thursday night to Elmer's Restaurant to hear the latest on Hinkle Creek. Doug Bateman, a research assistant for the OSU College of Forestry since 1989, is working on the fisheries studies at Hinkle Creek. He received his M.S. in fisheries science from OSU in 1998.

Volunteers Needed!

Umpqua SAF runs a very popular booth at the annual Earth Day and Energy Fair held at the fairgrounds, but it doesn't happen without your help! Please contact Trixy Moser to sign up for a 2-hour slot on Saturday April 21st, to help hand out seedlings, practice tree ID, and make stamps/buttons with kids. No experience necessary, and it's lots of fun!

10-noon, noon-2pm, or 2-4pm
